Course No. 105

Introduction to Ethics

Course Description

This course will introduce the students with moral issues of everyday life—issues of right and wrong and good and evil that have puzzled and provoked thinkers for hundreds of years. It will deal with some important ethical theories including: the duty ethics of Kant, the utilitarianism of Bentham and Mill; ethical relativism and the virtue ethics of Plato and Aristotle. It will address the issue—whether there are objective truths about how we ought to live, or ethics is ultimately a matter of subjective opinions and desires.

The course is divided into two parts. Part A deals with ethical issues and Part B with different ethical theories.

Part A: Ethical Issues

- Normative ethics; Metaethics; Practical ethics; Environmental ethics; Utility of ethics
- Ethics, religion, psychology and sociology
- Postulates of morality
- Moral judgment – its nature, subject and object
- Theories of relationship between individual and society
- Theories of punishment, Islamic concept of punishment

- Moral progress, Islamic ethics: enjoining good and forbidding bad

Part B: Ethical Theories

- Greek virtue ethics: Aristotle's theory of virtue
- Moral relativism
- Moral Intuitionism
- Hedonism and utilitarianism
- Kant's Deontological theory
- Perfectionism

Economics

Course Description

This course consists of two sections of which the first one is an introduction to the basic concepts and principles while the second is an introduction to the economy of Bangladesh. The course is designed to provide the students with basic knowledge of economics, theory of consumer behavior and demand, theory of cost and supply, the present economic condition of Bangladesh.

Group A: Economic Theory

Basic Concepts: Scarcity & Choice; Mankiw's Ten principles of Economics; the Circular Flow Model of an Economy; the Production Possibilities Model; Comparative Advantage and International Trade; Role of Markets and Government in a Modern Economy

The Supply and Demand Model: Supply, Demand, Equilibrium, and Elasticity

Theory of Consumer Behavior and Demand: Consumer Equilibrium under Marginal Utility Analysis and Indifference Curve Analysis; Derivation of Individual Demand Curve and Market Demand Curve; Consumer's Surplus

Theory of Firm, Production, Cost, and Supply: Production Function; Law of Diminishing Returns vs. Returns to Scale; Production with a Single Variable Input – Total, Marginal and Average Products; Least-Cost Factor Combination – Equilibrium position of Tangency of the Isoquant and the Isocost line; From Production to Cost – Derivation of TC Curve from Expansion Path, Derivation of other Cost Curves from TC Curve, Opportunity Costs containing Explicit and Implicit Costs, Social Costs containing Private and External Costs

Market Structures, Pricing, and Output: Perfect Competition, Monopoly, Oligopoly, and Monopolistic Competition; Profit Maximization Hypothesis, Optimal Output Decision, Shutdown Point and Break-even Point, Necessary and Sufficient Condition for Optimization, Derivation of a

Competitive Firm's Supply Curve; Efficiency of Competitive Equilibrium – Producer's Surplus

Additional Topics: Factor Pricing and Income Distribution; Uncertainty and Information; Strategic Behavior; National Income – Its Measurement and Uses; Money, Banking, and Taxation

Group B: The Economy of Bangladesh

Economic Resources: Natural Resources – Bangladesh as a Developing Country – Obstacles and Preconditions for Economic Development – Sustainable Development for Bangladesh

Population: its Growth, Structure and Distribution – Population Problem and Family Planning

Industry: The fourth industrial revolution; Problem of Development Planning and Development Plans in Bangladesh; Role of Foreign Aid and International Co-operation

Fiscal Policy and Budget

Free Market Economy and Globalization

Symbolic Logic

Course Description

This course is an introduction to mathematical or symbolic logic. It has been designed to formalize the thinking process of the students to avoid making ordinary mistakes. This logic has two parts viz. sentential (propositional) logic and predicate (quantification) logic. Students will be required to have thorough knowledge in determining whether an argument is valid or invalid in both parts. The prescribed text for this course is Symbolic Logic written by IM Copi.

Text: I. M., Copi, Symbolic Logic, 6th ed., New York: Macmillan, 1983 (chapters 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5).

Students will be required to have a thorough knowledge of the problems dealt within the prescribed text.

Modern Philosophical Classics: Hume and Kant

Course Description

This course is concerned with the views of two classical philosophers—Hume and Kant. It is designed to provide the students with necessary knowledge of their major theories and basic concepts as well as their contributions to epistemology, metaphysics, ethics and society. Students are expected to have a thorough knowledge of the texts. The course is divided into two Parts: first part deals with Hume's Treatise of Human Nature and second with Kant's Critique of Pure Reason.

Group A: Text

David Hume, A Treatise of Human Nature, Book one, P.H. Nidditch (Ed 2nd ed., Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1978. অনুবাদ: আবু তাহা হাফিজুর রহমান, মানব প্রকৃতির স্বরূপ অন্বেষণ, ঢাকা: বাংলা একাডেমী, ১৯৮১। (Emphasis will be given on Hume's theories of perception, abstract ideas, relation of ideas and matters of fact, causality, external world and scepticism)

Group B: Text

Immanuel Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, Eng. tr. Norman Kemp Smith, London: Macmillan, 1964. (Emphasis will be given on Kant's epistemological and metaphysical views, focusing on his theory of synthetic a priori judgment, space and time as a priori forms of intuition, nature and role of categories of understanding, and the limits of metaphysical knowledge.)

Course No. 307

Philosophy of Mind

Course Descriptions

This course, as a field of linguistic philosophy, is concerned with the idea of mind as an existing entity. It deals with the debate concerning Descartes' dualist theory of mind and body where he recognizes the existence of mind as a separate mental entity different from the existence of body as a physical entity. The debate involved here is regarding two questions: (a) how a physical (physiological) process can result in a mental event; and (b) the difficulty in explaining how a mental event can result in a physical event. Another important question is that since the brain is an enormously complex system of brain cells, where and how does the conscious thinking take place? The entire issue will be discussed in the context of the two views forwarded by Shaffer and Ryle.

Students are required to have a thorough knowledge of the problems dealt with in the following texts.

Group A: Text

Gilbert Ryle, The Concept of Mind, New York: Penguin Books, 1983. অনুবাদ, আলী আফজাল কোরেশী, মনের ধারণা, ঢাকা: বাংলা একাডেমী, ২০০৬।

Group B: Text

J.A. Shaffer, Philosophy of Mind, Englewood Cliffs: Prentice-Hall, 1968. অনুবাদ, জহুরুল হক, মনোদর্শন, ঢাকা: বাংলা একাডেমী, ১৯৮৩।

Theory of Knowledge

Course Description

This course will focus on a series of related philosophical issues in the theory of knowledge (epistemology). Topics will include knowledge, justification, the reliability of perception, and the challenge of scepticism. Specifically, we will address the following questions:

- a. What is knowledge? We will start with the traditional analysis and introduce the Gettier problem.
- b. Where does knowledge come from? This is a traditional question and the most important question in modern philosophy. We will discuss how the modern philosophers dealt with the concept of “perception” and “a priori knowledge”, and shed light in the question.
- c. Can we really know? This is a sceptical question, and following this question we will learn some skeptical tradition as well as modern skepticism.
- d. What is epistemic justification? We will go through the contemporary discussions with respect to the issue of justification and the foundationalism/coherentism and internalism/externalism debates.

Aesthetics

Course Description

Aesthetics, or the philosophy of art, is a theoretical endeavor to explicate the essence of art by defining its nature, its specific function, and the grounds for its recognition and appreciation. The course outlines strategies purporting to answer the most basic questions about the status, origin and purpose of art as articulated by classic and modern thinkers.

In an effort to understand and explain various aspects of aesthetics or philosophy of art the course will particularly focus on the following problems:

1. Aesthetics and philosophy of art. Nature and definition of aesthetics. Function and value of aesthetics. Aesthetic and non-aesthetic attitude.
2. History of aesthetics: Indian aesthetics, Islamic aesthetics, Chinese aesthetics, Japanese aesthetics, Greek aesthetics, European aesthetics.
3. Relation of aesthetics to philosophy, ethics, logic and religion. Aesthetics and Feminist philosophy.
4. Relation of art to society, reality, religion, science, morality and knowledge.
5. Fundamental notions of aesthetics: aesthetic concepts, aesthetic pleasure, aesthetic qualities, aesthetic ideal, aesthetic properties, aesthetic principles, aesthetic experience, aesthetic objects and aesthetic emotion.
6. Aesthetic judgment: Nature and classification of aesthetic judgment; theories of aesthetic judgment. Modern Western interpretation of aesthetic judgment; aesthetic judgment and Immanuel Kant; aesthetic judgment, artwork and functional beauty; Leo Tolstoy.
7. Concept of beauty: Definition and nature of beauty; beauty and its various forms; interpretation of beauty in the light of Indian and Western traditions; beauty and art; beauty in nature; beauty and the critic's judgment.
8. Concept of art: Definition and nature of art; form and content of art; Conceptual art and philosophical theses of art; Major western theories of art: Imitationism, Expressionism, Functionalism, Emotivism and Formalism.

9. Intention and truth in art; Value of art: social, psychological, aesthetic, cognitive and artistic value of art.
10. Problems and nature of Indian aesthetics. Various Indian aesthetic thinkers: Brajendranath Seal, Rabindranath Tagore, Avanindranath Tagore, Anand K. Kumarswami and Swami Vivekananda.
